LAWN FETE GIVEN FOR MONTE VISTA HOME A SUCCESS

Delightful Program by Prominent Musical, Dramatic and Dance Artists

The lawn of the Marshall home, 525 South Central avenue, was a pretty sight last Saturday afternoon, when its owners generously threw open their spacious grounds for a garden party for the benefit of the kitchen equipment of the Monte Vista Home for Children.

Bevies of ladies in pretty gowns made a picture in the setting of green, with groups of leafy trees for a background, and the pleasant sun of springtime over all. Bright music by the high school jazz orchestra added to the gayety of the afternoon and a delightful program by prominent musical, dramatic and dance artists was featured.

Ala M. Farmer, graduate of the Boston School of Expression, captivated her audience with two readings: "At the Movies" and "Hulda Peglo's Love Letters."

Several of the students of the Pearl Keller studio contributed delightful numbers to the afternoon's entertainment. Among these were Howard Kent, who gave a charming reading of an Edgar Guest poem setting forth what happens "When Ma Steers the Auto"; Dorothy Dutton, who entertained with a captivating solo dance; Ethelwyn Kent whose reading was most entertaining; Gould Moore whose song and dance was given with his usual vim and finish of detail; Cecelia Mae Fischer whose two solo dances were given with her usual charm and grace.

Keaumoku E. Lewis' beautiful baritone was heard to advantage in two numbers, one a selection from Gounod's "Faust," the other Grieg's "I Love Thee."

Mrs. Lillian Seibel Carr's beautiful voice instantly won the hearts of her audience. She gave a group of songs: "Come to the Garden, Love"; "The Star" (Rogers), and "California" (Carrie Jacobs Bond). Mrs. C. H. Pendleton and Miss Gertrude Champlain added much to the pleasure of the afternoon by their musicianly, sympathetic accompaniments.

Booths where candy, ice cream and punch were served were well patronized and their proceeds added a gratifying sum to the afternoon's financial returns.

A charming and novel feature of the affair was L. G. Brand's donation of an airplane ride to the winner of the lucky number.

ZITE-LEEN STORE OPENED TODAY

The event of the morning in business circles was the opening of the attractive new store, "The Zite-Leen," at 140 North Brand boulevard. Mr. Zite-Leen has made an excellent reputation as a merchant in San Fernando, and he expresses himself as much pleased with the welcome he has received here, many having responded to his invitation to visit his store in spite of the lowering weather of the morning. He specializes in furnishings for men, women and children, including shoes, clothing, etc.

Women's Civic Club

At the meeting of the Women's Civic Club, which will meet Thursday afternoon at the Branch Library building at Los Feliz and Brand, a demonstration will be given of the pressure cooker and other electrical appliances.

Mass Meeting Held

A mass meeting to protest against the proposed extension of the Forest Lawn Cemetery has been called to meet in the Branch Library at the corner of Los Feliz and Brand Tuesday evening, May 17, at 8 o'clock.

LOCAL MAN HEADS TRACTOR COMPANY

According to an announcement by A. W. Crossman, coast manager for the Cleveland Tractor Company, Harry E. White has taken over the exclusive distributorship of the Cletrac (tank type) tractor.

The new concern will be known as Harry E. White, Inc., and will be located at the corner of San Fernando road and Brand boulevard, Glendale.

Mr. White needs no introduction to the people of Los Angeles county, as he came to California in 1881 while yet a baby. In 1896 he finished his education and immediately became involved in civic and political life; at one time holding the office of secretary of state hospitals under the administration of Governor Gillette. Later on he was appointed deputy county assessor for Los Angeles county where his wide acquaintance became firmly established. In 1912 Mr. White became interested in the La Canada valley and devoted his efforts to the encouragement and development of this scenic district as a location for wonderful country homes. He was instrumental in interesting Senator Frank P. Flint in its wonderful possibilities, which resulted in the latter's development of what is now known as "Flintridge."

In 1916 Mr. White contracted the automobile fever and purchased a half interest in what has been known as the Packer & White Automobile Company. Starting with a yearly business of $50,000, this growing concern increased its sales until last year the $400,000 mark was almost reached. The Cletrac Tractor was one of the lines handled by the Packer & White Automobile Company. Seeing a demand for a tractor of the Cletrac type in the territory, Mr. White was prompted to sell his interest in the automobile company, so he could give his undivided attention to the betterment of an organization selling only tractors, farm power machinery and implements.

Harry E. White, Inc., is now located in temporary quarters at 712 East Broadway until their new home is completed.

At 712 East Broadway they will carry a large stock of tractors, tractor parts and implements for the convenience of the ranchers, fruit growers and gardeners of the entire district who are assured a welcome at any and all times. A service station with expert mechanics will also be maintained.

RECEPTION FOR MR. AND MRS. OLMSTEAD

Following the regular Sunday evening service at the First Methodist church in this city a reception was held for Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Olmstead, who have been spending a furlough with Mr. Olmstead's parents in this city and are now leaving to resume work in the mission field. It was their last Sabbath here, as they are to board a train in a few days for Chicago, where they will spend several months in preparation and then go to Burmah as missionaries sent by the First Methodist church of Glendale and supported by it. Mr. Olmstead made a brief talk about their plans and purposes and Mrs. Starkey presented to him and his wife bouquets of flowers from the J. O. C. class, of which Mrs. Olmstead has been a member. Then their friends came forward to clasp their hands and wish them godspeed.

MRS. JOSEPH GIVES SMART FUNCTION

Entertains With Progressive Games and Dance in Her Beautiful Home

The home of Mrs. Jesse Joseph on Orange and Lexington was on Saturday evening the scene of one of the smartest parties that has been given in Glendale in some time. The large and beautifully furnished house with three living rooms which can be thrown together, lends itself admirably to social uses and a delightful evening was enjoyed by her guests, Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Boyer, Mrs. Boyer's sister Mrs. Newell, and her niece Miss Loomis, Mr. and Mrs. Lou Sherman, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lockwood, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Gibbs, Mr. and Mrs. well of Los Angeles, Dr. Emil Tholen, Miss Lucille Tholen, Dr. Knickerbocker of San Francisco, Dr. Bobbiet, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Conrad of Long Beach, son and daughter-in-law of the hostess.

The early part of the evening was given to progressive games for which prizes were given which went to Mr. Sherman and Mrs. Lockwood.

A mock wedding arranged by Mr. Sherman and in which he officiated as clergyman, made a very entertaining diversion. The Henning orchestra furnished the music for the dancing which occupied the balance of the evening, refreshments being served about midnight. Flowers were everywhere and the hostess was warmly congratulated on the success of the affair and the beautiful setting in which the party was given.

GIRLS' RALLY AT BAPTIST CHURCH

About 70 girls of the various churches of Glendale met for a rally and tea at the Baptist church Saturday evening at 6:15.

Mrs. Brown asked the blessing and then everyone got busy visiting with each other and eating their suppers.

In about a half an hour the plates were pushed aside and the program opened with a vocal duet by Miss Dorothy Peart and Miss Myra Johns entitled "In the Garden." This was followed by a short talk by Miss Maud Soper on the "Victorious Life." To achieve it, she declared, we must have faith, but there are two kinds of faith—one a faith of the intellect, the other the faith of obedience. Faith means vision plus valor. We must believe, she said, but we must also reach out and grasp the truth and live for it. Three ways of developing faith were mentioned—prayer, Bible study and service. The signs that we have it are peace and joy in our lives and victory over sin.

After the talk Miss Soper reviewed the purpose of the meeting, viz., to help the girls who have accepted Christ and to carry on Mrs. Neth's work for "the other girl."

The girls then organized the "Christian Circle club" of which Miss Mildred Elliott was unanimously elected president and Marian Rich, secretary. Meetings will be held every Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock, and the ladies of the various churches will furnish a light supper for 75 cents. After the supper there will be Bible study and prayer under the leadership of Miss Soper. The purpose of the club will be to "win the other girl."

BIG MEETING OF JUNIOR MUSIC CLUB

Members of the Junior Music Club had a big and enthusiastic meeting at the home of their director, Mrs. Spencer Robinson on East Windsor road Saturday night, between 50 and 60 young people attending.

Preceding the program was a business session over which the prsident, Miss Veda Knapp presided. Miss Genevieve Mulligan, recording secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting, and Kenneth Jackson, the treasurer, gave a report. The club decided to giv a program for disabled soldiers at Thornycroft, May 28. It also selected Santa Monica as the place where its annual picnic will take place June 11. A business session of the club will be held nxt Thursday afternoon at 3:15 in the music room of the high school at which it is expcted all officers and chairmen of committees are expected to be present.

Following the business session a very nice program was given which included:

Scherzo for violin and piano (David), by Marcella Webb and Leonora Rose.

Piano solo, "Rustle of Spring" (Sinding), by Margaret West.

Piano solo, "The Butterfly" (Grieg), by Leonora Rose.

Violin duet by Genvieve Mulligan and Julia Robinson.

MRS. A. E. JACKSON CALLED BY DEATH YESTERDAY

Widow of Robert M. Jackson, for Many Years Prominent in Civic Life

A RELIGIOUS WORKER

Her Passing Brings Sorrow to Many With Whom She Had Come in Contact

The Glendale friends of Mrs. Alice E. Jackson, and they were many, learned with sorrow that death had found her Sunday, May 15, at the home in Maryland court which she shared with her sister, Mrs. Ewell Smith. Her life had been one of devoted Christian service and she will be much missed in many circles into which her activities penetrated.

She was born September 7, 1858, in London, Ky., and came with her husband, R. M. Jackson, to Southern California about nine years ago.

From early childhood Mrs. Jackson had been a member of the Christian church and she was state secretary of missionary work in Kentucky before coming to California. Immediately upon coming to Glendale she and her husband identified themselves with the Central Christian church and have since been active and influential members until the death of Mr. Jackson about ten months ago. Two years ago Mrs. Jackson was appointed state secretary of missionary work for Southern California and her efficient and devoted service in that office broke down her health which had always been frail. She will be sincerely mourned by her pastor and fellow members in the church here. Such women are not easily replaced.

She, and her husband also, were prominent in the civic and religious life of the community for years, Mr. Jackson serving on the board of city trustees and also as secretary of the Elks' Club, and secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

A large circle of relatives mourn the death of this good woman, including her mother, Mrs. R. L. Ewell of Kentucky, her sister, Mrs. Ewell Smith, four brothers—R. Ewell of Arkansas; Major George Ewell of Fort Sheridan, Illinois; John Ewell of Lexington, Kencucky; Logan Ewell of Benham, Kentucky. Besides these there are five nieces—Mrs. Mattison B. Jones, Mrs. F. W. Pigg and Mrs. W. E. Evans of this city; Mrs. L. A. Phillips of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Ben F. Logan of Pineville, Ky.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Little Church of the Flowers in Forest Lawn memorial park, conducted by Rev. Clifford A. Cole, and with the Jewel Undertaking company in charge.

MRS. WILLIAM SMITH HOSTESS TOMORROW

Mrs. William Smith of 328 West Lomita avenue will be hostess tomorrow afternoon to the ladies of the Church of the Holy Family and their friends, whom she will entertain with a silver tea. Assistant hostesses will be Mrs. Louis Burstein and Miss Helen G. Brophy. A musical program, interspersed with other entertainment features, will be given and refreshments will be served.

Irene Dalton, a former Christy comedienne, is now supporting "Ham" Hamilton in Mermaid comedies.

Protest Muzzling Dogs

Protests are coming in over the telephone to the Daily Press against the dog-muzzling ordinance.

Lovers of man's best friend, the dog, cry out against this treatment of him; their contention is that a muzzle is a cruel thing, in that a muzzled dog can only eat and drink when his master, often a thoughtless one, gives him food and drink; and they claim, moreover, that the muzzle is entirely unnecessary if everyone in the community, whether he have a dog or no, put out a pan of water where dogs passing by may get it; this water should be changed every two or three days.

This provision for the dogs' comfort is not only a kind, humane measure, but also one of safety for the general public and as a safety measure alone is one that should be adopted, its advocates tell the Daily Press.

"Even human beings go mad for lack of water," said one of these protestants, who is well versed in the care of dogs, "imagaine what it would be to us to have to wait for a drink till some one took a notion to give it to us—especially in hot weather!"

It is an absolute fact that no dog ever goes mad that has access to drinking water. The best authorities on dogs are agreed on this," continues this dog lover; "why not adopt this absolutely safe measure of giving all the dogs plenty of drinking water, and obviate the necessity of muzzling them?"

If it's actually true, that plenty of drinking water for every dog will mean absolute safety for us, why not adopt this plan, say we.

At any rate, why not investigate the soundness of these contentions, at once?

Registration Ends May 28

There is an important city election on June 28 and every citizen that is entitled to vote should register at once.

From 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., you can register at chamber of commerce rooms, 104 South Glendale avenue and from 5 to 9 p. m. at Roberts & Echols' drug store at the Branch Library on Brand boulevard.

MANY EBELLS GO TO YOSEMITE MEETING

Mrs. C. H. Toll of This City, President of Club, Chairman of Resolutions

Members of the Ebell Club of Los Angeles, of which Mrs. Charles H. Toll of this city is president, will form quite a colony at the annual meeting of the State Federation of Women's Clubs to be held in the Yosemite Valley. A special Ebell train, for which enough members have enrolled to fill five cars, has been chartered and 50 tents have been engaged for them at Camp Curry. They expect to have a royal good time on this outing, quite independent of the entertainment provided by the convention. Many of the Ebell ladies will be prominent in the splendid pageant that is to be staged as one of the program numbers, but Mrs. Toll had to decline a role because she is chairman of the resolutions committee and expects to be too busy with that work for any dramatic stunts.

C. E. BANQUET IS JOLLY OCCASION

State executives of the Christian Endeavor were guests of the local entertainment committee at a banquet given in the social hall of the Glendale Presbyterian church Saturday evening at 6:30 o'clock.

It was a very pretty and jolly function. The tables were arranged in the form of a hollow square and covers were laid for 42. The Christian Endeavor colors—purple and gold—featured the decoration, bouquets of calliopsis adorning the board and streamers of purple and gold crepe paper were festooned from the chandeliers to the corners of the tables. Yellow sombreros marked the places and the color scheme, as far as it consistently could be, was carried out in the menu.

Miss Ethel Preston, who had charge of the affair, was assisted by Mrs. C. D. Stoler, Miss Margery Smith, Fred Hoffman, chairman of pages; Will Richards, vice chairman of general committee, and Miss Carol Duncan, chairman of reception committee.

At the conclusion of the banquet familiar ongs were sung and there familiar songs were sung and there

Following the evening session the guests were entertained in the homes of the local committee members.

CAKE COMPETITION FOR MAY FESTIVAL

At the May festival to be given under the auspices of the Glendale Federation of Parent-Teacher associations, cakes will not only be on sale at the special cake booth which one of the associations is to provide, but they will be on exhibit and a prize will be given for the cake pronounced the best by a competent set of judges.

The rules of the competition call for a cake baked according to a recipe given by Mrs. Kate B. Vaughn, who recently gave a demonstration before the P.-T. A. members and students. The festival will take place Friday, the 20th, afternoon and evening, on the grounds of the intermediate school. The cake recipe follows:

One and one-half cup sugar, one-half cup Snowdrift shortening, one cup water, four egg whites, three cups pastry flour, three teaspoons Royal baking powder, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon Ben Hur vanilla extract, one-half teaspoon Ben Hur oragne extract.

Cream shortening, add sugar and cream together. Sift dry ingredients and ad alternately with liquid. Add vanilla, beat mixture thoroughly and lastly fold into the stiffly beaten whites of eggs. Pour mixture into two cake tins and bake in a moderate oven for twenty minutes.

Orange Icing—Four egg yolks, two cups water, two-thirds cup of boiling water, one teaspoon Ben Hur orange extract. Boil sugar and water until it spins thread, pour over yolks beaten well. Ad extract and beat it until it begins to granulate. Pour over cake.

GAVE DELIGHTFUL DANCE SATURDAY

Mr. and Mrs. George B. Pratt of 356 Myrtle street were hosts on Saturday evening at a dance given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Harry N. Fowler of La Crescenta, who are leaving this week for Chicago. Huge bouquets of mixed garden flowers lent their beauty and their fragrance to grace the pleasant occasion, which was enjoyed by 18 guests. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

SUNDAY TOPIC OF REV. W. E. EDMONDS

The Sabbath morning's sermon at the Presbyterian church by Rev. W. E. Edmonds was founded upon the word "add" in the passage II. Peter 1:5-8: "And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness—for if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall be neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." Peter is speaking here a stirring message concerning precious things. The significant word "add" is fitting for us in view of the work we have just been engaged in. We must now not slump, but "add." Peter, a man who had touched Christ, once had met his Waterloo; but from Pentecost on he was a flame of fire. Each one of us needs a perpetual Pentecost.

Peter speaks now about the precious blood of Christ. As you value things, put first value on the precious blood. The word "add" is a striking metaphor; its literal meaning is "chorus," referring to the making together of many parts into a harmony. Peter says all those things are to be brought together as a chorus. "Add to your faith virtue." This word is not well translated; the original means courage, spiritual manhood. The need these days as never before is for the courage that believes God means what he says, courage to do and to stand, out in the open. Then, add knowledge. Do you know the things of God? Do you know how to lead a soul? The word of God is a gold mine to those who know it. Another note in the chorus is temperance. The true meaning of this word is self-control. The hardest foe is self; it must be put into harmony with God. And add patience. How sweet the harmonies of patience! And godliness. Godliness is profitable. Every man must face death alone; he needs what is profitable. Godliness reaches upward. How about your life all around? Brotherly kindness reaches out sideways, the outlet of godliness.

Now as to the incentives to live the chorus life. "If these things be in you, they make you that ye shall not be barren"—that is, idle. Is this a day to sit down idle? God has not given us a single moment that we can afford to lose. Another incentive—that you may be fruitful. Real fruit, growing out, not tied on.

Now, add. Peter in the shadow of his execution, whites: "I am anxious that there shall be chorused unto you an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom." A battered ship drifts unannounced into harbor, cargo lost, masts and rigging gone. Are you willing to go in that way? Another comes in triumphant, on schedule time, precious cargo all safe, crowds to bid it welcome—an abundant entrance. Will there be those looking for you?

God help us to heed, to speed, and at last to reach the goal through riches of grace in Christ Jesus.

AUTO ACCIDENT ON SAN FERNANDO ROAD

In a collision between an automobile driven by Dr. Brain of 428 West Salem street, this city, and another car driven by Charles Haussman of Pacoima canyon, at San Fernando and Broadway late Saturday evening, quite serious injuries were sustained by several persons. Dr. Brain is reported to have broken a leg and Neal Hountz and Mrs. Mabel Vickery, who were with him, to have been damaged to some extent. The doctor stated that his steering wheel broke and caused him to lose control of his car. Mr. and Mrs. Haussman were taken to the Glendale Research hospital where Mrs. Haussman's back was found to be hurt, but both are doing well, according to the bulletins of the hospital, and will soon be well enough to leave.

Kathleen Norris is the latest recruit to the Goldwyn roster of authors. She is the author of many short stories and novels.

GOOD SPEAKERS TO APPEAR AT NEXT FORUM DINNER

E. F. Saunders and A. Lincoln Hart Will Discuss Subjects of Interest

EXPECT BIG AUDIENCE

Mr. Hart Is Founder of the Ethical Motion Picture Society of America

E. F. Saunders and A. Lincoln Hart, famous motion picture director, are to be the speakers at the forum dinner of the Chamber of Commerce on Thursday evening. Mr. Saunders' topic has not been announced. Mr. Hart comes as the founder of the Ethical Motion Picture Society of America, organized in Los Angeles late in the year 1920, to explain its aims, its ideals and its plans. World leaders are becoming more and more interested in the movement toward better pictures; pictures with a purpose; pictures that will satisfy the mind-hunger of those whose bodies, perhaps, are underfed and poorly clothed; pictures that will encourage the despondent, enlighten the ignorant, give to the humble the advantage of travel amid the world's most fascinating scenes; pictures that will spur the small boy to deeds of love and heroism; pictures that will teach the uncultured beauty of refinement and awaken in them a desire for self-improvement.

The Ethical Motion Picture Society was not established to act as a board of censorship. This society does not pose as a group of reformers. It is wholly constructive and not critical. That the time for its establishment was ripe is evidenced by the fact that no sooner had the home chapter in Los Angeles been organized than additional chapters in neighboring cities came into being, and the movement received immediately the endorsement of prominent men and women who recognize its opportunities for inspiration to better life through the great medium of the motion picture. Mr. Hart spoke last Tuesday before the Shakespeare Club of Pasadena, and also before the Better Film Week committee, whose membership consists of a representative from every public body in Pasadena. Mr. Hart is also on the program of the Tuesday Afternoon Club for June 14.

L. B. BEACH WILL SELL FURNITURE

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Beach of 1227 North Brand boulevard moved to Glendale from Colorado and have purchased property in Casa Verdugo. Their carload of furniture reached here last week and since its arrival the Beaches have been confronted with the problem of finding room for a carload of furniture in their furnished flat. To relieve the situation they have decided to sell their furniture, and they have inserted an ad in the Press which appears in the Classified columns of today.

LOCAL TEAM WINS IN TENNIS MATCH

The tennis match between teams of Glendale High and Citrus Union, which took place on the home court Friday afternoon, resulted in a score of 10 to 7 in favor of the Glendale players. The score shows that: Tom Morgan won first singles; McDonald lost second singles; Wilbur Johns won third singles, and Norman Begg won fourth singles. Tom Morgan and Wilbur Johns lost the first doubles; Norman Begg and Andrew McDonald won second doubles.

The team is now tied with Alhambra for first place and a game to determine supremacy will soon take place on some neutral court.

Glen and Dale Entertain California Executive

Guests of Glendale Convention Committee Lay Plans for Big Convention June 25 to 29—Tentative Program Includes Big Men in Religious World

Twenty-three members of the executive committee of the California Christian Endeavor Union spent Saturday and Sunday in Glendale, the guests of the local Endeavorers and in attendance upon the regular quarterly meeting of the state executive committee. All sessions of the committee excepting the Sunday morning session were held in the Presbyterian church at Broadway and Cedar. The Sunday morning session was held on the platform of the tabernacle at Harvard and Orange.

The state committee holds its spring session each year in the city in which the annual state convention is to be held, in order that a thorough canvass of the situation may be made with the local committee in charge of arrangements. Howard L. Brown, chairman of the local committee, and his assistants, went over the details of the arrangements, explaining the plans for caring for the crowds which will be here for the 34th annual convention, July 25 to 29.

The tabernacle recently used by Evangelist Brown, will be enlarged by the addition of a wing on both sides to meet the needs of the crowds which will be here. The registration ran as high as 5185, which was the attendance at Long Beach two years ago when the largest state convention in the history of the movement was held.

The tentative program was outlined

'The Hummer,' Chicago and Alton Wrecked

Twenty Passengers Hurt, Several Seriously—Fireman May Die—Indications Point to Deliberate Attempt to Wreck Train—Official Inquiry Started

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., May 16.—An official inquiry into the wreck of Chicago and Alton train No. 9, known as "the hummer," which was derailed three miles from here last night, was launched today by railroad authorities. Belief that the wreck was the outcome of a plot was expressed by officials.

Work of clearing away the wreckage was completed today and the tracks opened for through traffic. All of the injured are being cared for in Bloomington hospitals. About 20 persons were hurt, several of them seriously, and William Suttles, fireman of the "hummer," who was severely crushed, may die.

The "hummer" left Chicago at 6 o'clock last night for Kansas City. It carried about 200 passengers.

When about three miles out of Bloomington it struck an open switch while traveling at the rate of 50 miles an hour. The engine left the rails, bumped over the ties and crashed into a string of "empties," on a siding. The mail and baggage car and the smoker also were derailed but the passenger coaches remained on the tracks.

H. E. Wood, special counsel for the Illinois public utilities commission, who was on the train, declared the accident "the most deliberate attempt to wreck a train I have ever seen."

A. P. Titus, general manager of the Chicago and Alton road, asserted that the siding switch where the wreck occurred had been tampered with by the removal of the bolts controlling the switch standard and that, although the switch was open the standard light gave the engineer a "clear track" signal.

ASK RETURN OF WHIPPING POST

By MARGERY REX
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, May 16.—Lay the lash upon the felon's back!

Administer sharp physical pain and thereby purge the criminal of his desire for evil deeds and protect innocent citizenry against his depredations!

A cure for crime—so old that it's new—suggested by Lewis L. Fawcett, of the supreme court of Brooklyn!

The remedy—novel enough in these days—would bring back the old institution of the whipping post, the cat-o-nine-tails and perhaps the stocks.

"Stone walls do not a prison make," observed an old poet, and likewise has Judge Fawcett repeated the familiar line in connection with his radical recommendation.

And let it be known here that Judge Fawcett has been widely extolled for his clemency, and often called the man who wears "his heart upon his lapel." Hence the startling aspect of his cure for crime.

Declares for Whipping Post

Long prison terms do not deter or prevent crime, declares the justice, who, several days ago, after passing sentence upon a man convicted of a hold-up, announced himself in favor of the whipping post, combined with shorter period of punishment in jail.

"I would recommend the use of the lash upon certain types of criminals," the judge said today. "For robbery, burglary, blackhand and white-slave crimes, let the sheriff lash or hire huskies to whip these especially grave offenders."

The personal opinions of the judge upon crime and punishment are not prompted by lack of sympathy for transgressors, or a belief that vengeance constitutes justice.

Nor does he go to the sentimental extreme of saying that to sentence a felon to a whipping would pain the court more than it would the criminal.

Belief that nowadays we do not properly punish crime or try to prevent it, has prompted Justice Fawcett to advocate publicly the return to the lash as a means of promoting protection for normal, peaceful people.

Have Minds of Children

"The criminal's state of mind," said the judge, "is quite that of the child caught at the jam jar. If he is taken early enough and given a punishment he won't forget, he is apt to stay away from the jar. If not, he will become bolder and more complacement over his crimes.

"Men go to Sing Sing and come out time after time with a feeling, not that they have paid for crime, but that they have merely obtained asylum for a while.

"Bed and board at the expense of the taxpayers form the only risk that confronts the hold-up man or white slaver in the pursuit of his career.

"If he is caught he goes back again, relieved of the strain of 'work,' enjoys the comparatively pleasant existence in our modern penitentiary and suffers no punishment.

"The number of old offenders that crops up continually proves prisons don't reform. Then there is something wrong in the method of 'punishment.'

"Instead of giving a fourth offender 'life'—always his fate—I would recommend six months in jail with a lashing every 30 days, the first strokes to fall previous to incarceration.

Will Never Come Back for More

"Let him be stripped to the waist and given ten welts with the lash. His skin may be broken, so let it be washed with a salt water solution to prevent infction.

"He will suffer more or less agony. The wounds will heal in 22 days, normally, and he will be free from pain about the time he is ready for his next whipping.

"At the end of his six months' imprisonment, when he gets the last lashing, he will leave jail in pain. If he wishes to continue as a wrong-doer he will very likely leave the state where such severe penalties await him.

"He will not blackjack any more innocent citizens to drive them incurably insane from blows on the skull. He will not rob and injure any more victims and make little children dependent upon institutional care and force helpless women unfitted for work to go out into the world of toil.

"The defective, of course, should not be whipped. But we must believe that many bad people want to be bad."

SECRETARY HUGHES HAS SHORT LUNCH

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Charles E. Hughes, secretary of state, bids fair to ruin one perfectly good government institution, to-wit, "lunch."

Lunch, to government officials, particularly high government officials, has meant far more than a mere midday meal. For many years "lunch" has covered a multitude of leisure.

Calling at an official's office at 11:15 one has been very likely to be informed that the secretary of affairs with Borneo has "just stepped out to lunch." "When will he be back?" Oh, very shortly." That sounds very well, but after the first visit the wise one takes no stock in the "very shortly." Instead, he goes out and eats a leisurely lunch, sees a motion picture show and then drops back on the secretary about 3 in the afternoon and learns that he "isn't back from lunch but we expect him very shortly." This time the wise visitor sticks, for if he leaves and returns at 4 o'clock he is apt to find that the secretary has gone to tea.

Now along comes Mr. Hughes, of New York, and institutes the 29-minute lunch hour. Think of that! A lot of officials in the state department have been thinking of it and their thoughts would not permit of publication, for when the chief is in the department it is best his aids be there also.

Mr. Hughes doesn't take his lunch at any regular hour, but when he leaves his office for the Metropolitan Club his doorkeeper and the rest of the staff know that he will be back in 29 minutes.

THE MOST DREADED SPIDER

By ALFRED COOKMAN
Department of Science, Glendale Union High School

A few days ago, a representative of the Press called at the science laboratory in the high school and asked the writer to contribute a brief article on the habits and characteristics of the most dangerous spider in America.

One never knows what a school boy will bring into the laboratory and willingly donate to the collections in the department of science. Several lads have captured in Glendale, what the writer believes to be species of the most dreaded spider on the American continent.

For several years, the writer has procured spiders from many localities in the west. The object of developing a large collection of spiders is to eventually aid materially in contributing facts that will assist other archeologists in working out a classification of the spiders on the Pacific coast. At the present hour, we have nearly 1000 arachnids that have been taken in Southern California from the mountains to the sea.

Last Saturday morning, the University of Southern California photographer had the opportunity of photographing 800 specimens of the writer's collection for scientific purposes.

Of the vast number of specimens obtained in Southern California, 18 bottles contain representatives of Latro dectus mactaus—the "red spot" spider, or "Black Widow." The writer believes that this species is the most dangerous arachnid in America. Twelve containers have specimens in them taken in Glendale and vicinity.

The "red spot" spider (Latro dectus mactaus), is of especial interest. In all countries where they occur, they are greatly feared on account of their venomous bite.

The spider is a coal black arachnid marked with red or yellow or both. The most constant mark is one half-diamond red spot on the ventral aspect of the abdomen. The female when full grown has an abdomen the size of a large pea and measuring about one-half inch in length. The abdomen is globose in shape, marked with one or more red spots over the spinnerets. I have found specimens in which there were no distinct red or yellow markings. The male is much smaller than the female, measuring a quarter of an in in length, and is even more conspicuously marked. It is a curious fact that immature females are also brilliantly marked like the males.

Children playing in old barns, around fallen logs, in cellars and under houses should be warned to look out and see that they do not allow the "red spot" spider to fasten his chelicerae in their tender skin. The bite is venomous and I have records on hand to show where men have died within 20 hours after having been bitten by the "dreaded crawler."

This spider spins an irregular web of very coarse silk. They rest in the center of their web with their abdomen hanging downward. They are more active after the sun goes down. They catch insects in their web or snare. A silken thread is thrown over the victim by the combs on the hind tarsus of the walking legs. This snare is supposed to be derived from the lobed silk glands, which have been found only in this family (Theridiidae) of spiders.

George E. Sutton, an engineer employed in charting the route of the New Arizona and San Diego railroad, has taken several spiders at Dos Cabesos. He tells of the agony suffered by a number of the men who have been bitten by this species of spider. The fatalities attending the bite are sufficiently well attested to rank as scientific facts.

Dr. Bickford of Anaheim, describes a case of a ranchman who was bitten by the "Red Spot" spider and died within 20 hours. The spider dropped upon the man's neck. He felt a sharp, stinging sensation and found in sweeping his hand over the place, the dreaded black spider. Presently a number of small white pimples appeared about the wound, which to the naked eye were invisible, but which the attending physician discovered with the aid of a lens. The pain passed from the neck to the abdomen, producing violent cramps, and later a spasmodic attack. These were followed by coma and then death. There was no swelling but the left arm, the neck, and part of the left side assumed a stone-like hardness.

William A. Ball of San Bernardino is one of the few men who have recovered from the bite of the spider. He stated that after the bite a severe contraction of muscles took place, the pain in the hip joints, chest, thighs and abdomen seemed as though the bones were being crushed to fragments and the illness lasted for more than ten days.

The foreign species of Latro dectus is found in Southern France, Corsica and in New Zealand. In these places this dreaded spider has wound itself into gruesome folk-lore of the country.

In the United States, Latro dectus mactaus is found in the southern states and in the southwestern part of California and Arizona.

Eugene Prebery's famous old play, "The Virginia Courtship," has been purchased by Realart and will shortly be produced as a vehicle for one of the corporation's stars.

THE SCHOOL BOND ELECTION

Mr. Voter: Remember the School Bond Election, May 24, 1921, 8 a. m. to 6 p. m.; polling places, Central avenue school for those living north of Doran street; Cerritos avenue school for those living south of Windsor road; Intermediate school for those living between these two streets. Amount of proposed issue, $199,000.

This amount is absolutely necessary to put our schools in good working condition and take care of the tremendous growth that Glendale has had in the last two years.

Remember that the cost to you is small. If these bonds are voted it will increase your tax rate 16 cents or less on the $100; that is to say, if you are the owner of a home worth $5000 assessed at 40 per cent of its value, the cost to you of these bonds for the first year would be $3.20.

The benefits far outweigh the cost. Do not fail to go to the polls and vote.

TELEGRAPH BRIEFS

NEW YORK, May 16.—Armor patrol boat No. 46, an oil burner, moored alongside of army pier No. 5, Hoboken, blew up today and first reports received by the police said that two or possibly three members of the crew were missing. Two of them were said to have been sighted in the cabin, wreathed in flames. One man was rescued from the burning deck and two others were pulled out of the water where they were blown by the force of the explosion. The eyes of one of these were literally blown from his head. The trio were rushed to the hospital where it was said their condition is serious.

LONDON, May 16.—The foreign affairs committee of the Polish parliament has voted lack of confidence in the present government and it is reported that Premier Sapieha is about to resign, according to a dispatch from Warsaw today. In some quarters this report was interpreted as an indication that the influence of Adelbert Korfanty, Polish Nationalist leader, has proven sufficiently strong to wield the threat of overthrow over the heads of the present ministers.

The blood of a human being is not identical with that of any of the lower animals.

The fewer clothes one wears the higher one's temperature, is the statement of a well-known physician.

RULES OF MANNERS ISSUED FOR GIRLS

(By International News Service)

CHARLOTTE, Mich., May 16.—To be a perfect lady a girl cannot use rouge, wiggle, toddle, chew gum or cross her legs in public, nor sing ragtime.

So says Mrs. James Randolph, club woman and head of the Eaton county league for reforming high school girls.

A "Manual of Manners" has been prepared by the league, Mrs. Randolph says. It will be supplied to every high school girl in Eaton county and later it is planned to extend the work of the organization to other cities.

The manual, which contains 42 pages, deals with everything from a "come hither eye" to eating two pieces of cake at parties.

According to the manual how can a girl be a perfect lady if she

Crosses her legs in street cars or other public places?

Chews gum in public?

Receives her boy friends on the street corners or in dark nooks in the park?

Powders her nose in public?

Tells her girl friend in shrill tones in the movie theater what her boy friend said on the previous night?

Uses rouge or a lip stick?

Toddles or wiggles at dances?

The manual says "it can't be done."

The "modern Hoyle also points out to girls that their boy friends are not "Chesterfields" if they:

Loll in front of pool halls, flicking admiring eyes at passing girls.

Insist on monopolizing a popular girl at dances.

Ignore the "wall flowers."

Remain at girls' homes after 10 o'clock at night.

Dance cheek-to-cheek.

Hold their hands in their pockets.

Whistle in public.

Parents also come in for a few don'ts, including one which warns them not to bar their daughter's "sweetie" from their home and thus encourage her to meet him on the corner.

HUNTSVILLE, Texas, May 16.—Tracked down by bloodhounds, six escaped convicts, considered the ring-leaders of the band of 40 men who fought their way out of the state penitentiary Thursday, were captured today 12 miles west of this city. They were armed with two shotguns and four revolvers, but when the guards opened fire they surrendered. Late yesterday Ernest N. Kelly, serving a double life sentence and believed to be one of the master minds who planned the escape, was captured and it was believed today that the remainder of the fugitives would soon be rounded up.

WEIGHT INCREASED HEALTH RESTORED

By Following the Teaching of
MILTON H. BERRY
PHYSICAL EDUCATOR

Persons Paralyzed Cured --- Constipation and Gas Accumulation Banished

No one man in the community has created so much interest and lively discussion as the nationally known physical educator, Milton H. Berry.

By following his instructions, weak, listless persons, underweight, suffering from different symptoms of disease, ageing fast, broken, dull and tired have been practically rebuilt, have put on weight, increased their vitality, and are becoming immune to disease.

People who were paralyzed have traveled hundreds of miles to receive his personal teaching. Some who were partially, and others who were completely helpless have had their limbs and bodies restored again to proper functioning. Mr. Berry is the originator of applying to victims his corrective methods for infantile paralysis which are now used in all children's hospitals — conclusive proof of the effectiveness of his science.

Strong, convincing letters received from physicians and surgeons as well as from scores of persons restored to health and strength, are in his files, splendid testimony to his capability.

Thousands of men, women and children have cured themselves of constipation (which is a form of bowel paralysis) and gas accumulation in the past few months by Berry's Anatomical Method. Most of these latter folks were cured by his method, which can be sent by mail. The method is his own original discovery and it is so efficacious that there is no return of the complaint, and it is so simple that a child can do it in the privacy of the home.

Those wishing to improve their health, or to increase their weight, should call at Milton H. Berry's offices, Suite 401 Merritt Building, corner Eighth and Broadway, Los Angeles (consultation free), or, if anyone requires Berry's Anatomical Method for banishing constipation and gas accumulation, five dollars and the following coupon should be mailed at once.

Attend to this vital matter promptly. Save yourself money and further misery.

JESUITS GO TO SOUTH SEA ISLES

(By International News Service)

TOKIO, May 16.—Spanish missionaries return to a field they lost at the end of the Spanish-American war, when 18 Jesuits arrive this month in Ponape, chief of the group of the South Sea islands. They succeed German Catholic missionaries displaced when the empire of Japan was awarded the mandate over the South Sea islands at the peace table in Versailles, and they will resume the work of other Spanish priests and lay workers, who were forced to temporarily suspend their labors in the South Sea field in 1899.

Far removed from the centers of Christian civilization, in a land where tropical disease and climatic conditions unite to make life unpleasant, these 18 Jesuits, nine priests and nine lay workers, go to Ponape as special emissaries of Pope Benedict, chosen, despite the difficulty of their field and the almost certain knowledge that they will never return to Europe, from scores of applicants.

It was 130 years ago that the Jesuit Fathers from Europe first established Catholic missions in the South Sea islands. Few Catholic communities at that time knew much about the South Sea islands or the great field of labor among the natives there. The natives knew only a touch of the Western civilization; they talked no language save a native lingo that was hard to master, no matter how diligent were the students. The first of the Jesuits labored well with their subjects in the newly opend field and when the Spanish-American war began there were Catholic schools and churches in the islands and a great field of people ready to understand the religion of the western peoples.

Japan Seeks Vatican's Aid

Then came the treaty which ended the war between America and Spain and German Catholics were assigned to the work then being conducted by missionaries from Spain. Priests and lay workers were sent there as the representatives of Pope Leo, and many of the new converts took up a study of the German language, giving up the Spanish which had been a part of their regular courses. In the 22 years the natives who knew Spanish became fewer and fewer, until today it is said that few save the oldest Catholic converts can speak the language of the coming prists. The work of the German missionaries continued until one yar ago, when Japan, anxious to have the work of civilization continued, asked Pope Benedict to send other workers to Ponape and the South Sea centers where 50,000 Catholics are interested in keeping the work of that religion going forward.

"There is no feeling of triumph on our part," said Father Castro, who sailed from Yokohama recently with three of his brethren, the last group of Spanish Catholics to go to the islands. "While we are replacing the German Fathers, and at the same time returning to a field which was ours 22 years ago, we are going primarily to continue the good work which has been kept going on in the islands for 130 years now, and we are proud that we were chosen from so many applicants in Spain to take up so responsible a work."

The last of the 18 missionaries from Spain were guests of the Jochi College Catholic School in Tokio for one month, while they waited for a ship to take them into the tropical land which will be their home, very probably for the remainder of their lives.

BLONDES SHOULD NOT WED BLONDES

(By International News Service)

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., May 16.—Marriage is a lottery. Men and women either win prolonged love or hatred. There is no middle ground.

Such is the opinion of Judge D. B. Deem, "the marrying justice," who has to his credit the performance of 6140 marriage ceremonies and more than 500 divorce verdicts. Judge Deem rules over the probate court here.

"A blonde woman should never marry a woman with light hair," declares Missouri's champion wedlocksmith. "Men and women should choose a mate of opposite outward features.

"Marriage is the same as two men going hunting together and living in the same tent. They either grow to respect or hate each other.

"A woman had better leave a man alone if she intends to marry him in order to reform him. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred she'll fail and such a marriage will end unhappily."

SALVATION ARMY DRIVE IN GLENDALE

It is announced that the drive for the Salvation Army will be put on in Glendale the last week in May. Mrs. Charles Hutchinson has been appointed chairman and Miss Eva Daniels, secretary. As soon as the Chautauqua course closes a meeting of representatives of all the important organizations in the city will be called to enlist their cooperation and plans for conducting the drive will be formulated.

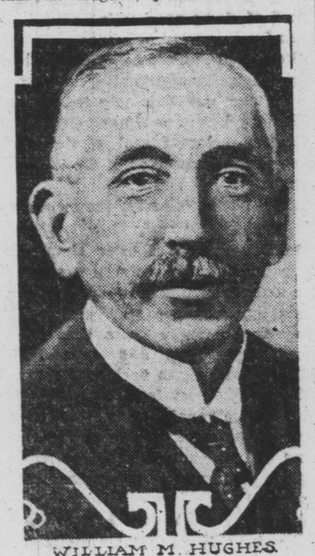
Glendale's quota last year was in the neighborhood of $1300 and it went over the top with $1700. No quota has been named this year, but in view of the tremendous growth of population Mrs. Hutchinson thinks $2000 for this drive is not too much to expect.

Understanding Sought Between Pacific States

Premier Hughes of Australia Appeals to America to Strengthen Bonds Between United States and "Outpost of White Race in Pacific"

(By International News Service)
WILLIAM M. HUGHES

MELBOURNE, Australia, May 16.—Encouragement of a closer union between the British empire and the United States, because "not only to us but to the whole world continued friendship of the two great Anglo-Saxon races means peace and progress," is urged in a letter sent by William M. Hughes, prime minister of Australia, to W. D. Boyce, Chicago and Indianapolis publisher, upon Mr. Boyce's arrival here.



WILLIAM M. HUGHES

Premier Hughes of Australia, is a self-made man. He once was an umbrella mender and later a wharf laborer in the country over which he is today the guiding hand.

The American publisher came to Australia at the head of a "South by Southwest" mission gathering material for word and photographic pictures of the island continent for the readers of his publications. Immediately upon Mr. Boyce's arrival the prime minister sent him a letter welcoming him to Australia and sending through him to the American people a message from the people of Australia. This message follows:

"In extending to you a hearty welcome to Australia I desire to express appreciation of your object in visiting the country. We cannot ignore the fact that the bond of blood and language has been strong enough to hold the United States to the United Kingdom, despite the deliberate machinations of mutual enemies. Nor can we forget that we fought and bled together in the greatest war of all time. In our outposts of the British empire Australians have realized to the full the significance of this mutual regard.

"Not only to us, but to the whole world, the continued friendship of the two great Anglo-Saxon races means peace and progress. All that makes for a closer union should be encouraged, and anything which threatens it should be condemned. We in Australia look to the sister democracy of America for cooperation in problems of mutual concern.

"Our destiny, like the destiny of your western states, lies in the Pacific. On the shores of this vast ocean are gathered the bulk of the peoples of the earth. They differ in language, ideals and religion. The rapid modernization of many of these peoples may increase rather than diminish the probably which inevitably arises where peoples of different races congregate.

"So we feel that we—the white outpost in the Pacific may look to the United States with a confidence born of mutual ideals. In our hands lies the destiny of the Pacific, and in our common task lies our strongest bond of friendship."

CONSISTORY MAY BE CALLED THIS MONTH

ROME, May 16.—It is stated, but not yet officially, in Vatican circles that the Pope will hold a Consistory on the thirtieth of May to impose the red hat on Cardinal Ragonesi, ex-Nuncio at Madrid, and to appoint four new Cardinals; namely, Monsignor Laurenti, Secretary to the Congregation of Propaganda Fide; Monsignor Mori, Secretary to the Congregation of the Council, and Monsignor Perosi, Assessor to the Congregation of the Holy Office.

These nominations to the Sacred College would leave four very important vacancies which I have reason to believe will be filled as follows: Monsignor Galli, Secretary of Briefs and Principes, formerly substitute to the Secretaryship of State, will go to the Holy Office, and Monsignor Fumasoni Biondi, Delegate Apostolic in Japan, will be appointed Secretary to the important congregation of Propaganda Fide. Monsignor Fumasoni has already sailed from Tokio and is expected in Rome some time in May. As regards Monsignor Tacci's successor, it is yet impossible to say who the new Majordomo will be.

Has Liking for Young Men.

As the Consistory will take place on the thirtieth of May, namely, five days after the General Elections in Italy, it is considered probable that in his allocution the Pope will allude to the political situation in Italy, voicing a word of peace between the Tascisti party and the Communists.

ALL ROLES PLAYED BY CAPABLE ACTORS

The policy of filling even small roles with important people gives the productions of the Universal organization an added interest which is particularly noticeable in "The Unknown Wife," now playing at the Glendale theater.

Hal Wilson, a veteran of stage and screen, plays one of the smallest roles in the production but he does it so well that the part stands out conspicuously.

Casson Ferguson, Spottiswoods Aiken and Jo Neary are three other of the widely known and popular players who support Edith Roberts, the Universal star, in "The Unknown Wife," which hundreds of local playgoers are planning to attend at the Glendale theater today. Miss Roberts appears as a girl who leaves a church-going community to marry the leader of a band of criminals. that start the story swings into an amazing sequence of thrillingly dramatic events.

Nicoles Family Moves

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Nicoles and family will move about the 20th of the month to a new home recently purchased by their son, Bert Nicoles, at 322 East Fairview avenue. It is in a very beautiful situation and they are looking forward to the change.

May Allison's latest Metro starring picture has the title of "The Last Card." It was adapted from Maxwell Smith's story, "Dated."

BRUSSELS RESUMES ITS CARE-FREE LIFE

(By International News Service)

BRUSSELS, May 16.—Brussels is resuming, little by little, its normal life of before the war.

Prices of all sorts of commodities are still higher than in 1914, but much lower than in Paris. The stores are filled with buyers and the small trades men, as well as the big industrials, carry an air of serene confidence.

At four o'clock in the afternoon the luxurious cafes of the boulevard Aspach and of the Place de Brouckere are filled with joyous crowds, smoking away and the hum of conversation and the music of countless orchestras. Brussels has become, as before the war, the paradise of smokers. Tobacco shops, strung at frequent intervals along every prominent street, recall man to his pleasure—or his vice, as you wish it.

Cigars and beer—the two things without which the happiness of a native of Brussels would not be complete—are dearer than before the war, but still are sold at reasonable prices. For instance, the kind of cigaret that costs 50 cents in American money in Paris may be had for from 25 to 28 cents in Brussels, and others sell at from 10 to 15 cents. A good Havana cigar may be had here for 5 cents. And a glass of beer which costs at least 8 cents in Paris may be had in Brussels for half that price, even in the best cafes.

Gasoline costs 50 cents a gallon here, while in Paris one pays about 80 cents for exactly the same kind.

Silk stockings, reinforced, sell for as low as $1.75 in Brussels. If Paris women all knew this they would fill the trains across the Belgian frontier.

GOOD ATTRACTIONS AT PALACE GRAND

The Palace Grand is showing for the last time today a play for the whole family; Maurice Tourneur's faithful picture-reproduction of James Fenimore Cooper's famous story, "The Last of the Mohicans."

Under Tourneur's skillful direction heroes and villains of a story universally beloved are brought to life. "The Last of the Mohicans is a story that lends itself most admirably to the screen; it has every element of the big picture—rapid movement, susbeautiful sets and a punch in every foot of film.

A special comedy is also offered on this bill at the Palace Grand.

WILLIAMSON, W. Va., May 16.—Word just received here says the town of Sprigg is being shot up. Machine guns planted on the mountainsides are pouring a deadly fire into the town, the report says. The firing this forenoon is heavier than at any time since the big battle opened. It is believed that an attempt is being made to prevent the concentration of state troopers and deputies. This is the first time the attacking forces have used machine guns along the Tug river front.

NEW YORK, May 16.—Varsity oarsmen of Columbia, Pennsylvania and Princeton matched sweeps on the Harlem here todya in the annual race for the historic Childs' cup.

CHANGES IN THE SCHOOL ROOM

Thomas A. Edison, after a series of examinations of college men, declares that the early education of children today is at fault. They learn little in their first days of school because the study is not made interesting, and does not gain and hold their attention. "Boresome" textbooks make for a great part of the fault, he says.

As a substitute, Mr. Edison says that moving pictures should be used in the early schooling of children. Mr. Edison believes in the power of the eye to understand better through illustration than through printed words.

The assertion that children would learn better through the use of moving pictures has some logic. It is a proven fact that people can understand better from illustration than from being told or having read the subject. The same thing holds true of the child beginning school. His attention would be held to the pictures produced to illustrate and explain a subject.

Especially in the teaching of geography and history would the moving picture serve well. A large illustration would hold the attention of the student and he would learn more quickly. Even in spelling, words produced on a screen would be carefully observed and planted in the child's mind.

Along with this assertion of Thomas Edison, Dr. Thomas Maitland Marshall, professor of American history at the University of Washington, declares a high school graduate does not know how to study. Here are two great men, one the foremost inventor of the age and the other a great educator, declaring students at the beginning and near the end of common school education are not properly trained.

Dr. Marshall says the student, when he is graduated from high school, lacks a necessary command of the English language and is deficient in a knowledge of geography and history and he cannot think logically. The student has no desire to know how to study. According to the professor, he has been fed up on fanciful economic and social ideas at the expense of sound training on fundamental political subjects.

The thought by Dr. Marshall that there is something lacking in our modern methods of school education and the suggestion by Mr. Edison that motion pictures should be used in the school room are not new. There has been for some time a crystallization of public opinion in that direction. The modern school system is at the threshold of an era of more or less drastic revision.

THE COST OF THE SERVICE

Two air mail pilots have been killed in the service in the last two weeks. Since the service was inaugurated less than three years ago nearly fifty pilots have been killed, more than half of them burned to death. People are beginning to ask, "Is it worth the cost?"

The principal advantage claimed for air mail service is, of course, the saving in time. Eight or nine hours is saved in time in carrying mail between Omaha and Chicago, and the saving in time between other cities is in about the same proportion.

There may be times when the saving of a few hours in the transmission of important documents from one city to another means the prevention of financial disaster for some individual or company and possibly on rare occasions transmission in this manner of unusual medicines or vaccines may mean the saving of human life. But such cases are not common.

With the telephone and telegraph at hand, both many hours quicker than air mail service; with an arrangement to transmit money by telegraph, day or night, and with court rulings the delay by telephone or telegraph, executions and stay court proceedings when the intention to file important papers has been declared, there are few cases where a delay of a few hours in delivery of such papers is of vital importance.

Air mail service is in keeping with the progressive spirit of America, which is most commendable, and the time will doubtless come when this service may be maintained with very little loss of human life. But apparently, the airplanes which are built today lack the essential endurance qualities which are required for long distance flying. The records prove that the engines have not reached a stage of perfection which makes combustion and fire negligible. While all progress is made at a great cost, there is certainly some justification for increased caution in the mail air service.

MRS. S. M. BROOKS GUEST OF HONOR

Mrs. S. M. Brooks, of Ventura, was the guest of honor at a dinner given in honor of her 80th birthday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. F. Wood, 1470 East Wilson avenue, on Sunday.

About 40 relatives and friends were present to congratulate her and to enjoy the dinner with her, a feature of the decorations being place cards in the form of photographs of Mrs. Brooks.

Those present were: Mrs. S. M. Brooks of Ventura; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Thacker of Van Nuys; Dr. and Mrs. Horace McCoy of Long Beach; Mr. and Mrs. Paul McClure and sons, Charles and John, of Van Nuys Mr. and Mrs. Forest W. Wood and children, Louise, Dixie, Elsbeth, William and Gordon, of Marion; Mr. and Mrs. A. R. McArthur of Pasadena; Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Edmondson, Miss Fanny Edmondson, R. B. Edmondson, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Mitford Crinklaw and daughter, Virginia, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie McClary, all of Oxnard; Mrs. S. E. Walker and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ward, all of Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Crinklaw of Calabasas; Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Chase and daughter, Margaret, and Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Wood and son, Dale T. Wood, of Glendale.

CHAUTAUQUA'S FINE SUNDAY PROGRAM

The large audience which gathered in the Chautauqua tent Sunday afternoon was treated to a fine and varied program. It opened with a community sing conducted by Walter Jenkins, of Portland, Ore., who was employed for such work in the army camps by the government during the war and who believes in community singing as a means of unifying sentiment and bringing people together independent of the value in culture.

After the song slips had been put away Father Cronin was introduced and gave an excellent talk on the flowers and weeds of literature. He is a witty Irishman and kept his audience in a bubbling state of laughter but underneath the fun was an earnest protest against the neurotic literature that is being spawned out by greedy authors and publishers who are catering to depraved tastes. He dwelt on the evil effects on the minds of romantic young girls of unrestricted novel reading and humorously depicted the heroine of the average cheap novel.

The main feature of the afternoon, "The Servant in the House," as presented by the Keighley Broadway players, was all that had been promised and made a tremendous impression upon the audience that will not soon be forgotten.

WOMAN'S COZY CORNER

By JOSEPHINE FRANCE

And now let us turn our attention to the spring suit. Every single day brings us a new and most often charming version of the 1921 models.

It seems to me that the sensible, conservative, severe-looking English tailored suit is "passe." We see now and we welcome the striking "couturiere" creations. Parisian suits are essentially feminine and, for this reason, so becoming to most of us.

In these imported models the skirts are decidedely longer—mind you, I don't say long—but longer.

Some suits, many of them, are beautifully embroidered. Lovely wonderful patterns appear. A beautiful dark blue suit has a motif of triangles worked in tarnish gold thread. Lattice work of squares covers sometimes the entire surface of the material. Many of the new jackets reach almost down to the very bottom of the skirt, while others, on the other hand, are quite short. The redingote with its semi-fitted lines is also in evidence, as they say in Paris, "il y en a pour tous les gouts."

Removable Collars

Very smart the large removable cape collars made of the material itself. These short capes, very popular last season, proved so becoming and practical that many elegantes insist on adopting them again this spring, hence their renewed success.

The skirts of the new tailleurs are all simple and almost always absolutely plain—if there is any trimming it is to be found on the jacket.

Very smart the new models of crepe de chine. One of the most charming creations designed this season is of gray crepe de chine trimmed with dull silver embroidery. The skirt has narrow pin tucks on each side. The jacket is trimmed with the same fine pin tucks and belted with a fancy silver girdle. The sleeve is long and narrow and is trimmed with a small cuff of cire gray satin, this same cire satin forms the flat collar and the revers of the jacket.

A Chain Belt

Another model is made of blue poiret twill. The coat stimulates triangles by an all-over embroidery of black chenille silk; while the skirt is absolutely plain, showing the new circular lines so much in evidence just now. The sleeves, rather narrow at the top, show a tendency to width from the elbow down to the wrist.

A chain of heavy steel forms the girdle. With this suit is worn a huge jabot of ecru lace.

A very new tailleur which seems to take its inspiration from Persia is most distinctive spring tailleurs. The jacket is cut with sharply flaring skirts and is trimmed with yellow and brown cire braid. The upper part of this jacket is exceedingly snug and fastens in the middle of the front with self-covered buttons. This model is decidedly youthful, although a bit eccentric.

A black crepe marocain costume, trimmed with an exceedingly narrow band of gray astrakhan edging collar, cuffs and hip pockets, is one of the most distinctive spring tailleurss. The lining of the ultra chic suit is fashioned of cire orange satin.

And now a word of advice.

Remember, before being tempted to buy a beige or a gray suit, no matter how smart and becoming it may be, that navy blue, our old standby, ever-isfactory color if real service and wear are to be exacted of the tailored suit.

faithful friend, is by far the most sat-

In this season of utter simplicity deep folds of the material are often the only trimming allowed—and, by the way, they are very smart. A charming organdie dress thus fashioned, the waist and skirt each trimmed with three horizontal folds.

The square neck fastens at the back with tiny organdie buttons. A wide sash of the material ties at the side front and its hanging ends are edged with a tiny ruffle of Valenciennes lace.

The petal frocks which have been so favored this past winter will again be worn this summer, but French voile will then replace chiffon and crepe de chine.

The newest Paris skirts are ankle length and quite full.

Hem lines are still uneven.

STUDIO NEWS AND GOSSIP

Specialization in Film Work

It is the age of specialization. Particularly is this true in motion pictures, an art which is developing so rapidly that this week's novelty is next week's banality. A surprising example of this tendency is the prominent and capable actress who has made a specialty of playing lady's maid in important productions in which every detail must be correct. "People who knew" among the motion picture fans were complaining about the conventional maid seen in so many pictures.

"She's not pretty," they would write, or "a maid so clumsy wouldn't last a week in a house of wealth," or "why don't you get an actress to play a part where important business must be 'put over?'"

"We'll give them a maid that is a maid," said Cecil B. de Mille, pioneer of so many advances in the picture art.

And so it was that Julia Faye came to be "Maid in Hollywood;" the satellite of many stars; a girl who has done in a range of historical periods running from the days of the Aztecs down to modern times.

World's Most Famous

She is the most famous lady's maid in the world, because she has the qualities other ladies' maids of the screen have lacked. She is good to look upon and has a charming figure; she is graceful in her movements and a thorough dramatic training on stage and screen has made her fully equal to the demands of the important scenes occurring between mistress and maid—or, as frequently, master and maid.

An Aztec maid to Geraldine Farrar in "The Woman God Forgot," maid to Miss Farrar in "The Devil Stone," maid to Florence Vidor in "Till I Come Back to You," Gloria Swanson's maid in "Male and Female," maid to Wanda Hawley in "We Can't Have Everything," and maid to Agnes Ayres in the latest Cecil B. de Mille offering "Forbidden Fruit."

"There are many, many little touches that one must know," says Miss Faye, "in order to stimulate the highly trained professional attendant of the woman of fashion. When I'm visiting my friends, I keep my ears and eyes open when the servants are around, for really actual observation is the one way to 'maid' correctly."

Lesson for Aspirants

The most famous lady's maid in the world! In "the pictures," of course, and a position any actress might be glad to hold, especially when success in such roles is bringing advancement in the photodrama, for recently Miss Faye has deserted maids to play other roles. She is the prying little minx in Cecil B. de Mille's "Something to Think About" and the ingenue in Realart's "The Snob." She will also be remembered for her work in "Why Change Your Wife?" and "Don't Change Your Husband."

There is a real lesson for screen aspirants in Miss Faye's career. It is—"Don't despise the small things of photodrama, for on a foundation of these things are erected the triumphs."

Jobless Directors and Actors

Almost every man one now sees on the streets of Hollywood idling along is a motion picture director or an actor out of a job. All are hoping for a change in the production situation and for a consequent revival of prosperity in their immediate vicinity. But they are showing bold fronts, and some of them really are better at make-believe off-screen than they are on. Men in a position to know express the opinion that months will pass before cinema conditions again become stable. For one thing the industry is suffering from overproduction. The blue law agitation throughout the country is another deterrent to the making of plans and the censorship idea is compelling every producer to watch his step in the matter of sex appeal pictures. All of which means that jobless directors and photoplayers will continue to experience difficulty in making worth while payroll connections.

Clara Smith Hamon Busy

Clara Smith Hamon, "Oklahoma's favorite but repentant sinning daughter," has arrived in Southern California and is reported to be busy planning for her motion picture career. She has secured studio space and her managers arre now organizing their forces for her initial picture. It is understood that the story of the picture will deal directly with events made familiar to he country at large by her recent trial for murder. Her advent here was accomplished without any showing of interest on the part of the public, and even the newspapers gave very little space to the movements. Interest in her apparently ceased when the jury returned a verdict of not guilty. Motion picture officials, however, are wondering what Clara will do with her picture after it is made. The industry is organized against her and the belief is expressed that no reputable distributing agency will care to handle the film. To a man up in the cinema tree it looks as if Clara will also be compelled to be her own distributor as well as her own theater opener.

Roy Stewart as a Star

Roy Stewart, noted for his western screen characterizations, is about to embark on his first starring venture under the management of the Quality Film Productions, Inc., a San Francisco enterprise. Four pictures will comprise the first series. The first will be made at the Montagu studios in San Francisco, pending the completion of the plant now under construction in the Bay City by the Pacific Saudios Corporation, where it is expected the second picture will be screened. In addition to his experience in westerns Mr. Stewart has scored successes as leading man with Katherine MacDonald, Betty Compson and Pauline Frederick.

LIQUORING ILLNESS

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Uncle Sam was feeling poorly last year if the liquor prescriptions issued since the Volstead act took effect offer a fair criterion. The prohibition office states that a total of 13,800,000 prescriptions were issued by 45,000 physicians.

The Baltimore police department has installed new motorcycle "patrol wagons" for suburban service. Each officer rides a sidecar motorcycle, the sidecar being fitted with leg-irons and hand-cuffs. No time is lost in locking the prisoner in the sidecar and hustling him to the calaboose.

Diamonds, rubies, sapphires and emeralds, in strict commercial sense, are termed as "precious."

FALL FROM HORSE CAUSES INSANITY

(By International News Service)

Arthur Scott Burden

NEW YORK, May 16.—Arthur Scott Burden, millionaire clubman and for many years prominent in society, is an inmate of Bloomingdale asylum. This became known when in the petition James A. Burden, filed a petition in the New York supreme court asking that a committee be appointed to take care of his brother's property. In the petition James Burden alleges that his brother is no longer competent to manage his own affairs. The petition also disclosed that Arthur Scott Burden was removed to the asylum April 2, 1920.

The petition says that since Arthur Scott Burden fell from a horse on his country estate at Jericho, Long Island, in 1913, he has suffered mentally. In April, 1915, he was overcome while playing golf at Aiken, S. C.

Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden and their 14-year-old daughter, Eileen, are in Europe.

PLANTERS REDUCE COTTON ACREAGE

(By International News Service)

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 16.—Farmers in the lower Mississippi valley, the home of long-staple cotton, for which a premium is paid on all markets, will grow betwen 30 and 40 per cent less cotton this year than last, it is indicated at the beginning of planting time. If the most conservative estimate, based on "present intention," is near accurate, the cotton acreage reduction will be the greatest voluntary reduction of record.

A survey by the United States government agricultural statistician of Mississippi, based on "present intention" of farmers, estimates that the Mississippi cotton acreage will be only 63 per cent as great as the acreage last year.

In a report covering the delta region of Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana, published just prior to the Mississippi government report, the Southern Alluvial Land Association predicted a 30 per cent reduction in cotton acreage. It estimated a 20 per be added a further loss of 10 per cent: cent involuntary reduction brought about by inability of farmers to finance a larger crop. To this might be added a furthr loss of 10 per cent chargeable later in the season to ravages of the boll weevil, making a total reduction of 40 per cent.

Vast Indebtedness Incurred

Big increase in the acreage planted to corn, hay and sweet potatoes and increased production of other food and feed stuffs is certain in the whole Lower Mississippi valley.

Farmers went into debt to buy their food and feed last year, expecting to pay out by growing a big acreage of high-priced cotton. They planted when prices were high, but at picking time prices were below the cost of production. Cotton became a drug on the market. Debts went unpaid.

Less cotton will be grown this year, because the market price is not attractive. More feed will be grown—first, to take the place of cotton on land in cultivation and second, to provide food and feed that otherwise would be bought on credit that already is strained.

It is believed that the move to cut cotton acreage this year will be a severe blow to the one-cash-crop system of farming especially in the immediate Lower Mississippi valley. The region that produces the long-staple cotton is likewise adapted to the growing of splendid crops of all sorts of grains, grasses and fobd stuffs. Good success with such crops this year will mean much added attention to them in coming years. Not only are the agricultural leaders urging the "safe farming" system, but bankers and business interests have put their shoulder to the wheel, realizing that there is too much gamble where only one crop is produced.

General Turbulence

(By International News Service)

The general turbulence throughout Europe was emphasized today by the widespread reports of violent death contained in the cablegrams.

Between 30 and 35 persons were killed in Ireland over the week end. A number of persons were wounded in Sinn Fein "terrorist" raids in England.

All of the western Ireland is reported ablaze with the Sinn Feiners waging desperate warfare against the crown forces.

In southern Ireland the Sinn Feiners are active and many battles are reported.

The losses of the British troops and black and tan policemen in the west are said to be unusually heavy.

Numerous detachments of British crown forces have been ambushed.

The black and tans and British soldiers are carrying out stern reprisals. Many Sinn Feiner homes have been burned.

Thirty persons were reported killed and 150 wounded in election riots in Italy.

Violent fighting continues in Upper Silesia between the Polish insurgents on one side and Germans and allied troops on the others and it is certain that the casualties are heavy.

Grace Darmond will have the feature role in "Handle With Care." It will be produced by the Rockett Film corporation.

Beatrice Joy and Lon Chaney have finished the filming of "Ace of Hearts," an original story by Gouverneur Morris.

SOCIALISM IN ITALY STEADILY DECLINING

ROME, May 16.—It may be safely and confidently asserted that Italy has weathered her storm, a storm far more dangerous than when she had to breast the blood-crested waves of war.

Then the whole nation was united in a grim, passionate effort towards victory, but when victory came, shedding a halo of glory on the survivors and on the 500,000 dead, Italy, by one of those inexplicable post-war phenomena, instead of rejoicing, became a house divided against itself."

Since the war Italian character appears to have changed fundamentally. Under Signor Nitti the Socialists and Extremists had taken the upper hand to such an extent that soldiers or officers in uniform were curtly ordered off the trains by Socialist railway men. There was, for some mysterious reason, such a reaction against the war that invalid soldiers, especially at Milan and Turin, formerly the stronghold of Italian patriotism, were brutally ill-treated, had their stripes torn from their uniforms, and in many cases were murdered in cold blood.

Non-Interference Policy.

Signor Nitti did not interfere, as he believed that things would settle down automatically after the war, as after an earthquake. This supine remissiveness to Socialist and Extremist brutality very nearly led to Italy's ruin, especially when the elections of November, 1919, returned 156 hot-headed Socialists to Parliament. These although they transformed the Chamber of Deputies into sort of Bedlam, showed that they were utterly unprepared for constructive legislative work. The only bill they voted was one raising their salaries from 10,000 to 15,000 lire a year. All the rest was verbose obstructionism.

When Giolitti, experienced old statesman, gathered up the reins of power, the situation was desperate, but he played a waiting game and succeeded in besting his adversaries.

This would not have been possible without the improvised anti-Bolshevik reaction of the ex-fighters, the Nationalists, patriots who had long been indignant spectators of Socialist and Extremist violence. They organized "fasci," or groups (so-called from the fasces of the ancient Roman lictors who preceded the consuls and who represented lay and order). The movement spread rapidly from towns to hamlets.

The motto of the "fascisti" was "an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth." Hitherto, and especially under the Nitti government, the Socialists and Extremists had had it all their own way, levying blackmail, mercilessly boycotting non-Socialist farmers and allowing their cattle to starve. But the "fascisti" appeared on the scene in a very combative spirit, fighting the Communists in their lairs, burning red flags and portraits of Lenin, smashing furniture and heads, and freely exchanging revolver shots and handling grenades. The people who had been cowed by the brutality of the Socialists now hail the "fascisti" as their rescuers, and the Extremists are looking very small indeed.

When the general elections take place on the 15th of May it is very unlikely that the 156 Socialist members who belonged to the last legislature will be returned to Parliament. At least one-third will succumb at the polls. And with the new legislature Italy will finally weather her post-war storm.

Warns Against Imposters

Mrs. Charles E. Htuchinson, chairman of the Salvation Army drive here in Glendale, warns the public against subscribing to unknown solicitors, as they are not authorized by either herself or the officers at the Army headquarters in Los Angeles. The drive here in Glendale will not begin for some time yet.

MILTON H. BERRY PHYSICAL EDUCATOR

Conclusive evidence of the effectiveness of the corrective methods of Milton H. Berry, physical educator, is the fact that they are now in use in all children's hospitals in infantile paralysis cases.

Mr. Berry's ad in today's issue of The Glendale Daily Press sets forth in convincing terms a method of relief from constipation, that bane of life that is all too common in America today. The Berry method of cure for this disease is one that is so simple it can be self-administered and is so efficacious that there is no return of the complaint.

UNDERSTANDING OF FOREIGNERS NEEDED

Exporters Should Not Confuse Idiosyncrasies With the Real Needs

CLEVELAND, May 16.—That successful foreign merchandising is closely related to psychology was the theme of an address delivered by Col. Fred Cardway, Packard Motors Export Corporation, before the Eighth National Foreign Trade convention now meeting in Cleveland.

"Psychological truths," said Colonel Cardway, "are independent of time, place or race. Every step in a sales negotiation is a mental process—the mental attitude and mental expression of the salesman: the mental attitude and mental expression of the customer; the arousing of attention; awakening of curiosity or interest; creating desire; satisfying the reason and moving the will—all these are purely mental processes, and in their understanding is found the bases for successful international marketing.

"Having gained full knowledge of the mental characteristics evolved from a given set of national influences, the salesman is then in the proper frame of mind to approach his prospects. His next aim should be to arouse curiosity. For curiosity whets one's appetite, and when the salesman has directed the attention of the buyer toward an image of something new—a new idea, a new device, or a new pattern, a great step will have been taken toward clinching the transaction. The novel always incites a man's inquisitiveness.

"We have heard a great deal lately of the necessity of meeting the demands of each foreign market. I think too strong emphasis on this point has given many American manufacturers an erroneous conception of foreign trade and has discouraged many of them from participation in international business. Some authorities have held the wrong conception that foreign trade is unattainable unless we follow minutely and accept unquestionably all suggestions and recommendations from local distributers.

"Obviously no exporter can for long successfully merchandise a product if it does not in basic essentials satisfy local requirements. On the other hand, we mustd raw a very clear distinction between national prejudices, national standards and those considerations which constitute merely the personal ideas of the dealer

"The distributer abroad is not unlike the dealer at home. He will ask for about anything that occurs to him. In most instances his requests will be based on a personal whim, and will prove to be in no sense an actual merchandising requirement of his territory.

"I am a great believer in centralized supervision and in the standardization of sales methods, and I feel that the exporter must evolve the principles of procedure, the method of merchandising and the system of selling on which his goods can be most satisfactorily exploited in every country. He should be a counselor on sales, advertising and service, and as such should inspire the goodwill and close cooperation of all dealers. It is by such systematized and unified operations that our export trade will reach its broadest development."

WHAT THE MOVIE FAN WANTS TO KNOW

Queer Hobbies

Some players have very queer hobbies. One of mine is as odd as could be imagined. I love to collect unusual and beautiful perfume bottles. My dresser is piled with all sorts of quaint, designs—long, short, fat and slim bottles, with fancy stoppers and queer and fanciful designs.

Mr. Wallace Reid has a penchant for musical instruments and his home looks like an instrument store. Another fad of his—if it can be so called—is medicine and surgery. I don't think Mr. Meighan has a hobby—if he has I haven't discovered it—unless his love of children could be called such. He seems to attract the little folk and they come to him as naturally as a baby gosling will run to water. His natural kindliness and sweetness of disposition is doubtless largely responsible for this attraction.

I have another hobby—if I may be permitted to mention it—odd shoes. I don't mean unmatched pairs, but odd in design, novelty shoes. I have about 20 pairs coming soon from exclusive makers and I am just mad about them.

But, as I say, it doesn't matter so much what one does—so long as it is a thing that proves enjoyable and gives the necessary relaxation. Whether it be collecting postage stamps or cultivating mushrooms, raising fancy dogs or training parrots and sea gulls—which Mr. Theodore Roberts does in his idle time—as long as it provides the essential relief from the everyday work, it is sure to prove beneficial.

This applies to those in other lines of endeavor as well, of course. But I sometimes think that with all its thrills, working in motion pictures is so intensive, is such a strain at times, that film folk more than most people require some such distraction in order to keep their minds fresh for the things they must do.

David Butler's current starring vehicle, "Sophie Semenoff," will go to the screen as "Making the Grade."

Edith Roberts' next Universal picture will be known as "The Gossamer Web." King Baggot will direct.

Lee Moran, Universal comedian, is to appear in "Robinson's Trousseau," from a story by H. C. Witwer.

to the executive committee. This program includes some of the big men of the religious world, as well as many men of prominence in Southern California.

Rev. Ira Landrith, editor afield of the Christian Endeavor World, the national organ of the movement, is to be here the last two days of the convention. Dr. Landrith is perhaps better known in California because of his connection with the Anti-Saloon League. He is the author of "A Saloonless Nation by 1920," the slogan presented to the Atlantic City convention in 1912. For 20 years Dr. Landrith has been the nation's foremost fighter for civic righteousness and is one of the most eloquent speakers before the American people today.

Dr. A. L. Shelton, M.D., will be another speaker. He is in this country recuperating from the thrilling experiences of being captured by brigands in Tibet. He was in their hands for 71 days and three nations united in seeking his release. He penetrated further into the land of this ancient people than anyone had hitherto. He tells vividly of his experiences.

Dr. Cortland Myers, pastor of Tremont Temple Baptist church of Boston, one of the largest Baptist churches in the country, is to be the convention speaker on the opening night. He is a man with a passion for souls and possesses a wonderfully fascinating personality as well as being a great orator.

Otis Ironmonger, recently here with Evangelist Brown, is an old favorite with the Endeavorers and will be with them again this year, in charge of the singing. Mrs. Fannie Marple Retts, whom all local people have heard, is to sing the decision solos for the evening sessions.

This is the first time that a state convention has been held in a city the size of Glendale, and the committee tried to impress upon the local people the size of the task they have undertaken. Sunday afternoon the two committees held a joint session, and the members of the state committee expressed their pleasure at the way the local people have grappled with the problem.

General Secretary Reese Martin of Berkeley, and Transportation Manager Arnold Anderson, of Oakland, were present from the north and reported a growing interest in the convention throughout their section of the state. A flag race is being conducted by the state union which is creating considerable excitement. The county union reaching its quota of delegates first has been awarded flag No. 1, and succeeding unions succeeding flags. Eleven flags have already been awarded and there is keen rivalry to secure a position as close up to the front as possible. Position in the honor parade, to be held during the convention, and seats in the auditorium, are to be assigned according to their standing in the race.

Sunday afternoon the committee took up the matter of the general condition of affairs throughout the state, and found that the organization is almost back to its numerical strength of pre-war days, of 30,000 members. However, the field secretaries reported a spiritual condition which is not encouraging, and an exhaustive discussion as to the best methods of stemming the rising tide of worldiness, was held. It was pointed out that conditions in many of the high schools throughout the state were deplorable, and that this could easily be traced to the amusements of today. It is hoped to offset this to a great extent by more extensive work throughout the state, and by the coming convention.

The recent Brown meetings were pointed out as having been a wonderful uplift to Glendale and would help to make a splendid atmosphere for the coming convention.

Those present included: B. Irvine Valentine, president, of Los Angeles; Reese Martin, general secretary, of Berkeley; Dr. Harry E. Straub, Los Angeles; Paul C. Brown, field secretary, Los Angeles; Harry C. Allen, field secretary, San Francisco; Miss Lula M. Minter, corresponding secretary, Santa Ana; Miss Tillie Genter, assistant corresponding secretary, La Jolla; Arnold Anderson, transportation manager, Oakland; Roy Martindale, assistant junior superintendent, Riverside; Chester Rutledge, evangelistic superintendent, Los Angeles; Miss Lela Holland, efficiency superintendent, Long Beach; Miss Helen F. Young, assistant missionary superintendent, San Diego; Dr. Grace R. Sharp, recruit superintendent, Satico; Miss Veva C. Wight, hospital superintendent, Riverside; Miss Altie Kemble, editor of the California Endeavorer, Redlands; Robert G. Rogers, lookout and extension superintendent, of San Pedro, and a number of visitors and former officiers who are still interested in the work.

County presidents were present from the south as follows: Miss Francis McCandless, Santa Barbara county; Howard Weller, Kern county; Charles E. Culver, Los Angeles county; Miss Mabel E. McFadden, Orange county; Glen D. Wight, Riverside county, and Phil West of San Diego county.

Men Active in Christian Endeavor Work

These two men will have much to do with the success of the coming State Christian Endeavor Convention, to be held in Glendale June 25 to 29 and, from all we know of them, their leadership will mean much to the convention. B. Irvine Valentine, the president, is contemplating making Glendale his home and at the present time is connected with The Glendale Press. Howard L. Brown, chairman of the Glendale convention committee, is a resident of Glendale, owning a beautiful home on North Maryland.

TARDIEU WARNS OF CONFLICTS

By EARLE C. REEVES
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

LONDON, May 16.—That Great Britain needs France as badly as France needs British cooperation in international affairs, is the reasoned appeal to the people of Britain made by Anare Tardieu in a very frank chapter in his new book, soon to be published here.

Aside from the military and economic reasons for the necessity of the entente which the French plenipotentiary he makes the startling assertion that England has grave need of France for the maintenance of relations with America. His wording is careful, but behind that is the hint that he is thinking not only of peace relations, but of Britain's need of France in the event of conflict.

"England, first of all, needs France for her safety, and the last war convinced the most incredulous of this fact," Tardieu writes. "If some day either a renewal of German aggression or the obscure development of Russian forces were to threaten France and Belgium in the east, then, and for the same reasons, Great Britain would be threatened too. Without Belgium and without France Great Britain has no battlefield on the continent to deploy her forces and protect her coast. When the road to Paris is open to invasion neither Calais nor Dover is safe. Every thinking Briton knows that, and is not likely to forget it.

"But Great Britain not only needs France to be safe in order to feel safe herself. She also needs France to be prosperous. It is to England's own interests that France should rise from her ruins, because the 20,000,000 bushels of wheat which can no longer be grown in our devastated regions forces us to compete with British buyers in the grain markets of the world; because the ruin of our mines, no matter how high the price of English coal, must weigh in the long run upon the reduced production of English mines; because throughout the whole world our colonial empires in contact are affected by each other's crises.

"Element of Stability" Needed

"And I go further still. Great Britain needs France as an element of stability and restraint in world politics, especially—and I say it plainly—in Anglo-American relations. The war revolutionized these relations. It created ties which, I trust, may never be broken. Yet how can we overlook that often the past weighing upon the present makes difficult the most essential collaborations? How can we ever look that friction may arise between the dominions and the United States? How can we overlook that in the modern world material and moral effects of economic struggles cannot be foreseen? And an economic struggle is even now engaged between the two great branches of the Anglo-Saxon race. British and American shipyards are racing to see which can build most. In the markets of South America and of the far east British and American firms are struggling for supremacy.

"For this healthy competition to remain a healthy stimulus and not become a danger Great Britain and America both need France as a connecting link and compensator.

"France is today the principal military power of continental Europe. That is enough for some to accuse her of imperialism, but is a victory a la Francaise, which does not deserve to be insulted by comparison with Bismarckian conquests. "Germany," said M. Clemenceau, "enslaved herself to enslave others. France frees herself to set others free." A great lesson in political psychology is contained in those few words. May the foreign office and all its representatives in all parts of the world take it loyally to heart and understand that Great Britain will always have far more to fear from Germany, even defeated, than from France victorious."

Chautauqua Programs

The Sam Lewis Company gave a delightful program at the Chautauqua this afternoon.

This evening's program is a treat that will no doubt pack the tent. Peter Clark Macfarlane, celebrated writer, will lecture on "Us Americans." The Sam Lewis company will give the prelude Consonant with public demand, Capt. T. Dinsmore Upton's lecture, "The Four Square Builder," will be given Tuesday evening instead of on the afternoon program. Lieurance's Little Symphony Orchestra will give a concert in the afternoon and the prelude in the evening.

A GREAT DAY AT CENTRAL CHRISTIAN

With 262 in Bible school, many extra chairs necessary in the service following and nearly as large an attendance at night, the Central Christian church's congregation and pastor felt the impetus given by the John Brown campaign.

The morning sermon by Rev. Cole was on the subject, "Why I am a member of the Christian church." He read as a basis for his remarks the 17th chapter of John, which he said was really the "Lord's Prayer," prayed by Him, while that which we usually designate as such is really the disciples' prayer. Said the speaker:

"The restoration movement is not a new religion, but simply a movement for the unity of God's people everywhere on the Bible as the sole creed, the teaching of Jesus and his apostles as the rule of faith and practice. The Master wished this above all things and so expressed it in His prayer. The restoration movement is not only a plea for this unity but it furnishes an ample and sufficient program for such.

Christ certainly started His church right, with its forms clear and simple, yet sufficient for every purpose. Why then, should we not get back to Him and His word, that the world may be convinced that all Christian peoples are one.

"All Christians, no matter what human names they may choose to add on to the divine one, believe that Jesus is the son of God and their Savior, so why have any other creed? For this creed can be preached everywhere, while man-made creeds cannot.

"Christ is the head of the church which is His bride and which should bear His name. Paul very pertinently asks; after rebuking some of the early Christians, who called themselves 'Apollosites,' 'Paulists,' 'Cephasists,' and so on, 'Can Christ be divided? Was Paul crucified for you?'

"As to baptism Christ Himself said, 'Go ye into all the world, discipling them. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. He that believeth not shall be condemned.' And Paul said, both in Galatians and Romans that baptism is a burial and resurrection 'like as Christ was buried and rose again.' Therefore if we love Jesus we will keep His commandments, as He said, and one of these is, according to Paul, who is recognized by all Christians as good authority, that we be 'buried with Him in baptism to arise and walk in newness of life.'

"The Christian church commemorates the suffering and death of our Lord on the cross, every first day of the week, as did the early Christians, and we must confess Him before men if we would have Him confess us before the Heavenly Father.

"We were not as kindly as we should have been toward our brethren in other communions in the early days, but we have learned better. We are glad now to take part in great campaigns for the uplifting of Christ and the church, such as has just closed in our city for they bring nearer the unity of the church which Christ prayed for.

"Therefore I am a member of the Christian church because its creed is the Word of God, its practices such as Christ commanded and which were observed by the early Christians, its name divine, not human, and because its constant plea is for unity not by the other churches coming to us, but by all joining in Christ."

The evening subject was "Five Things a Man Cannot Do." These are, as stated by the speaker: He cannot bring back the past, serve two masters, serve Christ without taking a stand for Him openly by confessing Him before men, advance in the Christian life except by growing in grace and good works, have a good outlook for the future life without having a good earthly life. All these were made plain by the speaker, who quoted Scripture to prove his assertions.

There was a large ingathering from the meetings and a baptismal service was held after the evening sermon.

HOBBIES OF SCREEN FOLK

By GLORIA SWANSON

Exciting and varied as is the life of the motion picture player, it is, I think, essential that all those engaged in the work should have some sort of hobby as a relaxation in the hours when they are not engaged in their professional activities.

Generally speaking, these extraneous hobbies should be as different as possible from the work which engrosses the major portion of their time. I believe, also, that outdoor sports are among the most advantageous forms of amusement. Oddly enough, theatrical people as a rule will fill in their idle hours, if they have any, by watching someone else act or see pictures made by other artists. Their devotion to their work, and the continual desire to see what to avoid or to attain ideas whereby to correct their own faults in acting, are responsible for this.

But I think we ought always to try to indulge in some healthful outdoor exercise—such as horseback riding, swimming, golf, etc. I enjoy all these, particularly the first. Tennis, too, is a fine thing for exercise and amusement.

Colleen Moore, who is now in New York playing the feminine lead in the Marshall Nielan production, "Lotus Eaters," writes her impressions of the eastern metropolis to a friend. Miss Moore says:

"Great buildings edge each other resentfully—with never the space for so much as a friendly alley between them.

"They reach their giant bodies toward heaven — these storied brick structures—and seem to be anxious to look disdainfully over the heads of their neighbors.

"Broadway is a sea of white light by night—light that seems to shoot into the face of the sky and demand explanation of the stars.

"Fifth Avenue is like a very modern painting—full of color and movement; it is the expression of a great feminine desire for beautiful raiment and a gorgeous home.

HISTORY WILL REPEAT ITSELF

The Motor Truck business will rival the pleasure car business. It is now just at its beginning. Past experience has proven that the Motor Truck business must be conducted as a separate and distinct institution from the automobile business.

Legions of new men will now make fortunes in the Motor Truck business, who get in on the ground floor, as average, successful Motor Truck salesmen make from $3500 to $5000 a year.

The Peerless Commercial Company with its principal offices in Los Angeles, are organizing an exclusive Motor Truck sales force for one of the best motor trucks known, and appointing a local representative in every community. No experience or capital, and only spare time, supplying information, and advising and assisting their experienced salesmen, is required of these local men. This offers an unusual opportunity for a local man to get started and eventually qualify to attain a position paying $75 to $100 per week, or more.

The transportation problem is today in a very unsatisfactory state. Motor trucks are the solution and are fast coming into general use. It is predicted that "history will repeat itself" and that the Motor Truck business will be the next big money making business of the country, as the automobile business has been during the past decade.

Anyone interested and desiring to get into the Motor Truck business in any capacity, should address for free and full information—
